The working class in France now, is in a real battle with capitalism

"France is the country in which the class struggle is to be committed to it's end" Marx

The wave of the strikes and protests, are increasing in France day by day, and city by city, against the policies of Sarkozy's government.

As a result of the economic crises, the French government, intended to impose new laws which target workers rights, and their achievements. The austerity policies, such as the new retirement law, to raise the age of retirement from 60 years to 62, which was the spark that flamed the wave of protests in a whole country, with a clear influence to other European countries.

The eyes of millions of workers across the world, are focused on Paris streets and other French cities, looking with admiration, and supporting the workers' movement.

The workers of refineries have succeeded to paralyze all movement, and the worker class in France now, is in a real battle with capitalism, which is giving the potential to all the workers internationally, to engage in this battle.

The EU states have observed the workers' "danger" in Greece a few months ago, and decided to emerge the capitalists there with financial support to avoid their collapses. The French worker movement is an initiative to an international worker movement, so we need to stand united internationally with this movement.

We are chanting and waving our hands to our comrades in France.

Long live the comrades in the refineries and other fields and sectors.

Long live the worker movement in France.

Long live the international solidarity.
